JURY SELECTION NEARS END FOR TRIAL OF TOLES

Several Challenges Taken By State, Defendant In Monday's Session

SCENE TO BE VIEWED

Murder In Second Degree Charged After Stabbing Of Noble Crawford

Testimony was expected to be started in Common Pleas court, Monday afternoon, in the trial of Lloyd Alonzo Toles, 37, Circleville Negro, on a charge of second degree murder.

At the noon recess the selection of jurors was rapidly nearing completion. The state had exercised two challenges and the defense, one. Each side is permitted four. After selection of the jury, members will be taken to view the scene of the murder in the river lowlands just west of Circleville.

The charge against Toles resulted from the stabbing death of Noble Crawford, of Haynes, last May 19. Haynes' body containing 18 stab wounds was found in a small pond in the lowlands shortly after he was killed.

Those seated on the jury at the noon recess were Vida Strawser, Pickaway township; George Hitler, Washington township; Harry Barthelmas, Deer Creek township; Sara Pugsley, Bryan Downs and Ralph Walters, Jackson township; Clyde Brinker and V. H. Frushing, Ashville; Frank Collett, Wayne township; Earl Liston, Monroe township; James Moffitt, Circleville, and Edna Pherson, Muhlenberg township.

There were six prospective jurors left on the original list of 30 summoned for the trial. Clara Macklin, Tarlton; Marvin Rhoades, Jackson township, and Farnah Warner, Madison township, were excused due to illness. Taylor McCray, Circleville, was excused when he explained that he had heard considerable discussion of the case. Ralph Timmons, Perry township, was excused because he did not believe in circumstantial evidence; E. C. Leist, Circleville, and Turney Leist, Washington township, were excused because of relationship to C. A. Leist, counsel for Toles. R. W. Dunlap, Pickaway township, was excused when he said he believed an indictment was a presumption of guilt. Page McCray, Madison township, was excused due to an opinion.

After the jury box was filled, Albert Tarbill, Perry township, was challenged by the state, Edna Pherson was seated. Winifred Rhodes, Ashville, was then challenged by the defense and Bryan Downs was seated. The second challenge of the state was used to remove Carl Andrews, Perry township. Viola Strawser was then seated.

With only six persons on the original jury list remaining to be called, it was possible that additional jurors might have to be (Continued on Page Two)

AUTOIST FACES DEATH CHARGES IN CAMBRIDGE, O.

CAMBRIDGE, July 17 — Police charged Francis Fairchild, 20, of Cambridge, with manslaughter today in connection with the death in a head-on collision of Mrs. Verna Greiner, manager of a Louisville, Ky., shoe store.

After questioning Fairchild officers said he was intoxicated and drove his truck on the wrong side of a Cambridge street, striking the automobile Mrs. Greiner was in. She died two hours later of a fractured skull.

Three other Louisville residents were injured in the crash. They were John Herschenroeder, 31, reporter for the Louisville Courier-Journal and brother of Mrs. Greiner, cut and bruised; Mrs. Lulie Herschenroeder, his mother, broken arm and lacerations; Miss Gladys Sullivan, 33, dislocated hip and lacerations.

U. M. W., Operators Confer In Effort To End Strife Over Contract

HARLAN, Ky., July 17 — Excitement approached fever pitch today in Harlan as the state prepared to bring to trial 243 striking coal miners arrested Wednesday following a gun battle between pickets and national guardsmen, in which two miners were wounded fatally.

All defendants were charged with banding to incite trouble and Attorney General Hubert Meredith of Kentucky was in Harlan to aid local authorities prosecute the cases.

Those scheduled to be tried today included George Tittler, secretary and treasurer of the United Mine Workers, District 19, and his wife. In addition to the other charges Tittler was accused of sedition and rebellion and assault on national guardsmen.

Harlan took on the appearance of an armed camp as time for the trials approached. As was the case when the miners were arraigned last week and held under bonds totalling $235,000, troops carrying rifles and backed up by machine guns guarded the tiny county courthouse and jail, filled to overflowing with defendants and spectators.

TRAFFIC MISHAPS SEND MOTORIST BEFORE JUSTICE

W. M. Cruik, 39, of Bridge street, Chillicothe, was fined $100 and costs by B. T. Hedges, justice of peace, Monday, on a charge of driving when intoxicated on Route 104, Sunday night. Cruik paid his account.

The sheriff's department said the car driven by Cruik struck two other cars. Two occupants of one of the cars suffered minor injuries.

The accident happened about 10:15 o'clock, nine miles north of Circleville. Officers said Cruik's car sideswiped cars driven by Harold L. Hess, 28, of 3786 Westerville road, Columbus, and W. H. Hess, 42, of 225 Nashoba avenue, Columbus. The men are brothers. Cruik was driving southward, the Hess brothers, going northward.

Mrs. W. H. Hess and her son, Wendell, suffered minor cuts.

The auto of David Dunlap, W. Franklin street, was damaged at 1:45 p. m. Sunday when it struck the river bridge on the Island road. The accident happened when the car driven by Mr. Dunlap and a truck driven by Charles C. Miller, 163½ W. Wheeling street, Lancaster, were passing. (Continued on Page Two)

CLEVELAND, July 17 — Quick thinking of a six-year-old boy was credited today with having saved his mother, brother and sister from possible serious injury when the boy's father died of a heart attack at the wheel of his automobile.

The boy, Ernest Patterson, Jr., turned off the ignition when he saw his father slump over the wheel. The car slowed to a stop in a shallow ditch and none of the passengers was injured. The father, Ernest Patterson, Sr., 53, was pronounced dead of a heart attack on arrival at a hospital.

Packers Must Agree To Contract, John Lewis Declares

CHICAGO, July 17 — The long-reported drive for unionization of the meat packing industry along industrial union lines was launched today by the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

John L. Lewis, C.I.O. chieftain, personally gave the "go ahead" signal in the drive, telling 10,000 cheering delegates at a Sunday rally of the Packing House Workers organizing committee that the nation's packers must agree to collective bargaining with their C.I.O. employers or "accept the consequences."

Most immediate result of the meeting was a vote by the P.W.O.C. authorizing a strike against Armour & Co., principal objective of the drive, unless the company agrees to meet with the C.I.O. in regard to an exclusive wage contract.

The P.W.O.C. also was authorized to call strikes against any other packing company which refused to bargain collectively with C.I.O. employees.

"The meat packers may think they're pretty big," Lewis declared at the rally. "Well, they're no bigger than United States Steel, General Motors, and the coal industry. These big industries changed their minds about wage contracts, and we helped them. Now we're going to give the same kind of help to the meat packers."

78,000 Members Listed

The delegates were informed that the P.W.O.C. has a membership of 78,000 out of 129,000 eligible workers in the packing industry, and that its membership is in the majority in 17 of Armour's 29 plants throughout the country.

It was claimed that the management of Armour had failed to meet P.W.O.C. demands for wage and contract conferences, and for this reason the strike vote had been authorized. A strike can be averted, it was pointed out, if the company will agree to conferences with C.I.O. representatives.

Lewis told the meeting the P.W.O.C. has been patient in its dealings with the meat packers. "Labor's patience is not without limits, however," he added. "Nor, I am convinced, will the American people generally continue to tolerate a condition of industrial serfdom in this industry."

Speaking of labor in general the C.I.O. chief declared that in trying to increase their own wages, C.I.O. workers are contributing to a better income for farmers by raising the purchasing power of workers.

TWO YEGGS CUT CONCRETE, STEEL TO LOOT VAULT

CANTON, July 17 — Officials of the Waynesburg, O., bank today started a tabulation of their account to determine the amount of loot obtained by two safecrackers who broke into the bank's vault yesterday.

Marshal O. W. Saurer of Waynesburg estimated that the bandits spent 15 hours in breaking into the safe.

Total amount of the loot was believed to run close to $20,000, besides negotiable bonds and contents of a number of safety deposit boxes which the bandits ransacked.

Elwood Thomas, a painter, was held prisoner by the bandits for six hours. Thomas had gone to the office of Dr. S. D. Stratton to do some painting and decorating and was forced to sit in a chair facing the wall by the bandits.

The pair had cut through the floor of the dentist's office and were cutting through the top of the vault when Thomas entered the office. The men cut through two and one half feet of reinforced concrete and steel to get into the vault.

JAILED MAN EATS LIGHT BULB, SOCKS AND SHIRT

COLUMBUS, July 17 — If John Richardson, 25-year-old Negro, had acute indigestion today, it was his own fault.

Departing from customary diets enjoyed by brother city prison inmates, Richardson had for his Sunday supper an electric light bulb, his socks and most of his shirt.

When police attempted to stop him from eating the socks and shirt, he chewed up the bulb and spewed ground glass on the officers. Richardson was locked up after he tossed a brick through a store window.

RESCUERS FIND NINE MEN DEAD

Miners Trapped Since Last Friday Leave Notes On Walls Of Pit

PROVIDENCE, Ky., July 17 — The nine men sought since Friday night when a gas explosion trapped them far below ground in the Duvin mine of the Buckman Coal company were found dead today by rescuers who until the last moment had hoped they would find the men alive.

Rescuers penetrating to the entry where the bodies were found said the men had scrawled notes on the mine wall in chalk telling of their desperate attempts to keep alive.

Nineteen other miners were killed instantly in the explosion, but the fate of the nine found today apparently had been even more horrible as there was evidence they had fought against approaching death.

One of the notes scribbled on a wall said: "All alive at 12:30. All praying and singing."

The note was not dated but (Continued on Page Two)

FOUR ARRESTED IN STRIKE TILT AT G. M. FACTORY

CLEVELAND, July 17 — Four men were arrested today as disorder broke out at the gates of the Fisher Body plant of General Motors, scene of a strike called by the C.I.O. wing of the United Automobile Workers.

The four men arrested were taken to a precinct station, and released a half hour later when they signed waivers.

Scuffling between police and pickets broke out each time that a carload of non-strikers attempted to enter the plant gates. Several cars were turned back, but in most cases police were able to open a path for the machines through the line of pickets.

It was believed no one was injured. Unionists charged that George Jencso, 29, one of the four men arrested, had been slugged by police, but he said he did not need medical attention when he was asked if he desired to go to a hospital.

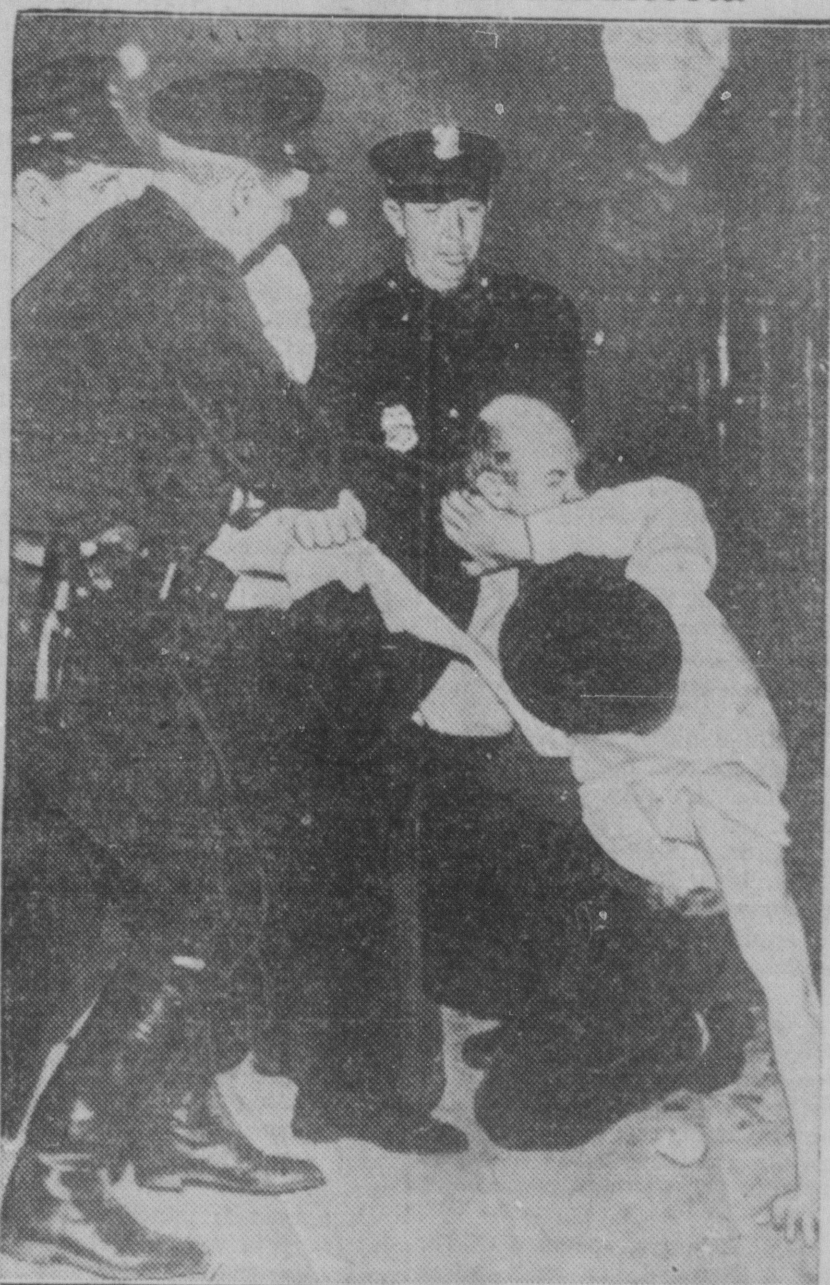

Pickets asserted one policeman drew his gun, but the officer promptly denied the charge.

POLISH GERMANS RECEIVE NAZI SUITS, LITERATURE

LONDON, July 17 — The London Daily Herald today reported that a secret organization distributing military uniforms and Nazi literature has been discovered operating among German residents of southwestern Poland.

In a dispatch from Warsaw, the Daily Herald said the preparations were being made for the day when "Adolf Hitler's forces march into Poland." A number of Germans were reported to have been arrested in connection with the organization's activities.

Eshelman Firm Building Addition to Its Plant

Construction was under way Monday on an addition to the J. W. Eshelman & Sons plant, E. Mill street, to provide additional truck loading facilities.

The addition will be constructed on the southwest corner of the plant. It will be a two story building, 43 by 75 feet, of steel with asbestos shingles.

Facilities will be provided for loading four trucks at a time. At present only one truck can be loaded at a time at the plant. All loading will be with belt conveyors.

Plant officials said that about three carloads of feed leave the plant daily by trucks. It is hoped to have the addition completed within 60 days.

The Eshelman firm has enjoyed a steady increase in business since it opened the Circleville plant in 1930. During the first six months of this year the plant enjoyed the largest business since it has been in operation. The six month business for this year surpassed the same period last year by about 25 percent.

SAVING AND LOAN BANK ROBBED BY THREE OUTLAWS

COLUMBUS, July 17 — Lining one customer and the office staff against a wall, three armed bandits today robbed the Clintonville Federal Savings and Loan Association of approximately $1,000 in cash, Manager James A. Nolan reported to the state highway patrol.

Nolan said the men, unmasked, entered the building about 11:20 a. m. Working quietly two of the men held off the persons in the bank while the other scooped the money from a cashier's cage.

Nolan said the men walked through the front door of the building and fled in a small brown sedan.

All three of the men were said to be about 40 years old. They were white.

The state highway patrol broadcast an alarm and set up a blockade in the northern part of the city.

Members of the police and sheriff's departments checked highways in this district in the search for the bandits.

LEADER OF BUND TO FACE COURT ON DRUNK COUNT

SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass., July 17 — Fritz Kuhn was hailed into district court today to answer charges of profanity and intoxication.

Kuhn, national leader of the German-American Bund and storm center of Nazi activities in New York, was arrested during an early Sunday morning altercation with Webster police. He was held in $54 bail.

At the time of his "run in" with the Webster officers Kuhn was accompanied by Count Anastase A. Vonsiatsky, leader of the White Russians in the United States and husband of the former Mrs. Marion Ream Stephens of Thompson, Conn., heiress to a $50,000,000 fortune.

Kuhn and the Count, according to Webster police, had been dining with a group of friends in a Webster cafe. When the group broke up, the Count, accompanied by Kuhn, entered their automobile. Police Officer Henry Plasse ordered the Count not to drive. Words were exchanged and Kuhn and the Count were escorted to Webster police station. It was decided that Kuhn and not the Count should drive back to Thompson.

According to police, Kuhn leaped to the wheel and while preparing to drive away shouted a volley of profane expletives — mainly directed at Plasse. The latter lost no time in booking Kuhn. The Bund leader and the Count put up the $54 bail for Kuhn. Then the pair, with Kuhn driving, left for Thompson.

DR. CLARKE CRITICAL

Dr. H. R. Clarke, retired dentist and Circleville's weatherman for many years, is seriously ill at his home, W. Union street. The doctor has been unconscious since Saturday night. He has been in ill health for many months. Last week he was slightly improved, but became worse the latter part of the week.

NEUTRALITY ACT HOLDS KEY TO END OF SESSION

President And Lieutenants To Decide Course At Monday Confab

LENDING BILL PENDING

All Other Vital Measures Out Of Way As Solons Tire Of Long Work

WASHINGTON, July 17 — Conferences between President Roosevelt and his congressional leaders today were expected to map a program that will permit a tired congress to go home after two more weeks of work.

Mr. Roosevelt was believed ready to abandon neutrality legislation for this session, and perhaps major portions of his new lending program in order to permit adjournment. If he takes a contrary view when senate and house Democratic leaders call on him at the White House today, a session lasting well into the Fall will inevitably result.

Neutrality and the lending program comprised the only major obstacles to an August 1 quitting date, and both are in a position to delay things for weeks if the executive insists on action. Bitter bipartisan opposition to the lending program assured a lengthy floor discussion of enabling legislation if it is reported in the form asked by the President.

Big Bills Passed

Except for these two pieces of legislation little remained on the program of work for the congress. All of the big departmental appropriation bills have been passed. Money has been provided for a record-breaking expansion of national defense. Measures designed to ease the tax burden on business have been adopted, and legislation liberalizing old age pensions and pegging the Social Security tax at one percent was in the final stage of conference between the two houses.

The Hatch bill, banning political activities by federal officials and employees, provided a complication, but nevertheless was expected to be acted on in the house this week, along with a resolution for investigation of the National Labor Relations board.

In the senate the Neely bill to prohibit block booking of motion picture films was under consideration, and passage was indicated. House action on this was doubtful, and will not affect adjournment anyway.

Neutrality provided the real question mark, despite leaders' belief that Mr. Roosevelt will permit the congress to go home without acting on it. The President's message reiterating his support of a bill changing existing law to permit sale of American arms and munitions was accepted by them as a "last word" portraying the administration position, and not as insistence by the executive on action.

A senate foreign relations committee 12 to 11 vote for postponement of action on neutrality until next session promoted the presidential message, and a powerful opposition coalition pledged itself to "talk until the snow flies" to (Continued on Page Two)

C. I. O. Starts Drive On Meat Industry

Packers Must Agree
To Contract, John
Lewis Declares

CHICAGO, July 17—The long-reported drive for unionization of the meat packing industry along industrial union lines was launched today by the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

John L. Lewis, C.I.O. chieftain, personally gave the "go ahead"
signal in the drive, telling 10,000 cheering delegates at a Sunday rally of the Packing House Workers organizing committee that the nation's packers must agree to collective bargaining with their C.I.O. employers or "accept the consequences."

Most immediate result of the meeting was a vote by the P.W.O.C. authorizing a strike against Armour & Co., principal objective of the drive, unless the company agrees to meet with the C.I.O. in regard to an exclusive wage contract.

The P.W.O.C. also was authorized to call strikes against any other packing company which refused to bargain collectively with C.I.O. employes.

"The meat packers may think they're pretty big," Lewis declared at the rally. "Well, they're no bigger than United States Steel, General Motors, and the coal industry. These big industries changed their minds about wage contracts, and we helped them. Now we're going to give the same kind of help to the meat packers."

78,000 Members Listed

The delegates were informed that the P.W.O.C. has a membership of 78,000 out of 129,000 eligible workers in the packing industry, and that its membership is

It was claimed that the management of Armour had failed to meet P.W.O.C. demands for wage and contract conferences, and for this reason the strike vote had been authorized. A strike can be called, it was pointed out, if the company will agree to conferences with C.I.O. representatives.

Lewis told the meeting the P.W.O.C. has been patient in its dealings with the meat packers.
"Labor's patience is not without limits, however," he added. "Nor,
I am convinced, will the American people generally continue to tolerate a condition of industrial serfdom in this industry."

Speaking of labor in general the C.I.O. chief declared that in trying to increase their own wages,
C.I.O. workers are contributing to a better income for farmers by raising the purchasing power of workers.

TWO YEGGS CUT CONCRETE, STEEL TO LOOT VAULT

CANTON, July 17—Officials of the Waynesburg, O., bank today started a tabulation of their account to determine the amount of loot obtained by two safecrackers who broke into the bank's vault yesterday.

Marshal O. W. Saurer of Waynesburg estimated that the bandits spent 15 hours in breaking into the safe.

Total amount of the loot was believed to run close to $20,000, besides negotiable bonds and contents of a number of safety deposit boxes which the bandits ransacked.

Elwood Thomas, a painter, was held prisoner by the bandits for six hours. Thomas had gone to the office of Dr. S. D. Stratton to do some painting and decorating and was forced to sit in a chair facing the wall by the bandits.

The pair had cut through the floor of the dentist's office and were cutting through the top of the vault when Thomas entered the office. The men cut through two and one half feet of reinforced concrete and steel to get into the vault.

JAILED MAN EATS LIGHT BULB, SOCKS AND SHIRT

COLUMBUS, July 17—If John Richardson, 25-year-old Negro, had acute indigestion today, it was his own fault.

Departing from customary diets enjoyed by brother city prison inmates, Richardson had for his Sunday supper an electric light bulb,
his socks and most of his shirt.

When police attempted to stop him from eating the socks and shirt, he chewed up the bulb and spewed ground glass on the officers. Richardson was locked up after he tossed a brick through a store window.

RESCUERS FIND NINE MEN DEAD

Miners Trapped Since Last Friday Leave Notes On Walls Of Pit

PROVIDENCE, Ky., July 17—
The nine men sought since Friday night when a gas explosion trapped them far below ground in the Du-vin mine of the Buckman Coal company were found dead today by rescuers who until the last moment had hoped they would find the men alive.

Rescuers penetrating to the entry where the bodies were found said the men had scrawled notes on the mine wall in chalk telling of their desperate attempts to keep alive.

Nineteen other miners were killed instantly in the explosion, but the fate of the nine found today apparently had been even more horrible as there was evidence they had fought against approaching death.

One of the notes scribbled on a wall said:
"All alive at 12:30. All praying and singing."

The note was not dated but the

FOUR ARRESTED IN STRIKE TILT AT G. M. FACTORY

CLEVELAND, July 17 — Four men were arrested today as disorder broke out at the gates of the Fisher Body plant of General Motors, scene of a strike called by the C.I.O. wing of the United Automobile Workers.

The four men arrested were taken to a precinct station, and released a half hour later when they signed waivers.

Scuffling between police and pickets broke out each time that a carload of non-strikers attempted to enter the plant gates. Several cars were turned back, but in most cases police were able to open a path for the machines through the line of pickets.

It was believed no one was injured. Unionists charged that George Jencso, 29, one of the four men arrested, had been slugged by police, but he said he did not need medical attention when he was asked if he desired to go to a hospital.

Pickets asserted one policeman drew his gun, but the officer promptly denied the charge.

POLISH GERMANS RECEIVE NAZI SUITS, LITERATURE

LONDON, July 17 — The London Daily Herald today reported that a secret organization distributing military uniforms and Nazi literature has been discovered operating among German residents of southwestern Poland.

In a dispatch from Warsaw, the Daily Herald said the preparations were being made for the day when "Adolf Hitler's forces march into Poland." A number of Germans were reported to have been arrested in connection with the organization's activities.

WORK on all W.P.A. projects in Minneapolis was suspended following a night of street rioting in which one man was killed and 20 persons injured, outgrowth of the city's W.P.A. strike. This as three other officers came to his rescue.

Eshelman Firm Building Addition to Its Plant

Construction was under way Monday on an addition to the J. W.
Eshelman & Sons plant, E. Mill street, to provide additional truck loading facilities.

The addition will be constructed on the southwest corner of the plant. It will be a two story building, 43 by 75 feet, of steel with asbestos shingles.

Facilities will be provided for loading four trucks at a time. At present only one truck can be loaded at a time at the plant. All loading will be with belt conveyors.

Plant officials said that about three carloads of feed leave the plant daily by trucks. It is hoped to have the addition completed within 60 days.

The Eshelman firm has enjoyed a steady increase in business since it opened the Circleville plant in 1930. During the first six months of this year the plant enjoyed the largest business since it has been in operation. The six month business for this year surpassed the same period last year by about 25 percent.

SAVING AND LOAN BANK ROBBED BY THREE OUTLAWS

COLUMBUS, July 17 — Lining
one customer and the office staff against a wall, three armed bandits today robbed the Clintonville Federal Savings and Loan Association of approximately $1,000 in cash, Manager James A. Nolan reported to the state highway patrol.

Nolan said the men, unmasked, entered the building about 11:20
a. m. Working quietly two of the men held off the persons in the bank while the other scooped the money from a cashier's cage.

Nolan said the men walked through the front door of the building and fled in a small brown sedan.

All three of the men were said to be about 40 years old. They were white.

The state highway patrol broadcast an alarm and set up a blockade in the northern part of the city.

Members of the police and sheriff's departments checked highways in this district in the search for the bandits.

NEUTRALITY ACT HOLDS KEY TO END OF SESSION

President And Lieutenants
To Decide Course At Monday Confab

LENDING BILL PENDING

All Other Vital Measures
Out Of Way As Solons
Tire Of Long Work

WASHINGTON, July 17—Conferences between President Roosevelt and his congressional leaders today were expected to map a program that will permit a tired congress to go home after two more weeks of work.

Mr. Roosevelt was believed ready to abandon neutrality legislation for this session, and perhaps major portions of his new lending program in order to permit adjournment. If he takes a contrary view when senate and house Democratic leaders call on him at the White House today, a session lasting well into the Fall will inevitably result.

Neutrality and the lending program comprised the only major obstacles to an August 1 quitting date, and both are in a position to delay things for weeks if the executive insists on action. Bitter bipartisan opposition to the lending program assured a lengthy floor discussion of enabling legislation
if it is reported in the form asked by the President.

Big Bills Passed

Except for these two pieces of legislation little remained on the program of work for the congress.
All of the big departmental appropriation bills have been passed.
Money has been provided for a record-breaking expansion of national defense. Measures designed to ease the tax burden on business have been adopted, and legislation liberalizing old age pensions and pegging the Social Security tax at one percent was in the final stage of conference between the two houses.

The Hatch bill, banning political activities by federal officials and employes, provided a complication, but nevertheless was expected to be acted on in the house this week,
along with a resolution for investigation of the National Labor Relations board.

In the senate the Neely bill to prohibit block booking of motion picture films was under consideration, and passage was indicated.
House action on this was doubtful,
and will not affect adjournment anyway.

Neutrality provided the real question mark, despite leaders' belief that Mr. Roosevelt will permit the congress to go home without acting on it. The President's message reiterating his support of a bill changing existing law to permit sale of American arms and munitions was accepted by them as a "last word" portraying the administration position, and not as insistence by the executive on action.

A senate foreign relations committee 12 to 11 vote for postponement of action on neutrality until next session promoted the presidential message, and a powerful opposition coalition pledged itself to "talk until the snow flies" to

JURY SELECTION NEARS END FOR TRIAL OF TOLES

Several Challenges Taken By State, Defendant In Monday's Session

summoned if attorneys exercised all their challenges.

Defense Calls 16

The state has called 32 witnesses. A list of sixteen defense witnesses was filed Monday by Mr. Leist. This list includes Frank Wilkinson, James Adkins, James Toles, Pat Hickey, Chauncey White, George Davis, Lina Jenkins, Charles Caudle, Raymond Smith, Kenneth Cox, Dale Tigner, Floyd Dean, Bill Green, Joseph Good, Frank Lynch and Jack Holmes.

Toles is a former inmate of the Lima State hospital for the criminally insane. The state will charge that robbery was the motive of the crime.

Charles Gerhardt is assisting his son, George E. Gerhardt, county prosecutor, in the trial. The trial is being conducted before Judge Meeker Terwilliger.

DIZ DEAN

the time we get back to Chicago next week."

Called By Bell-Boy

The reports around the lobby of the hotel where the Cubs are staying were to the effect that a bell-boy summoned Hartnett to Dizzy's room. There, the pitcher who didn't pitch against the Dodgers Sunday as he was expected to, was said to have been found moaning on his bed with Mrs. Dean attempting to stop the flow of blood. Hartnett summoned a doctor and after the treatment, Diz and his wife left the city.

An unofficial version that Dean collided with a glass cigar case could not be verified.

At Pittsburgh, where the couple's train made a brief halt, Mrs. Dean offered this explanation:

"Dizzy was asleep in bed when the phone rang. He stuck out his hand to reach for it and cut his arm on the glass top of the telephone stand."

A spokesman for the Commodore Hotel, where the Deans stopped in New York, made answer:

"There is nothing in the room which could have been responsible for a cut of that kind. All the glass has rounded edges."

Hartnett refused to state whether any infraction of the training rules was involved. Diz was treated not by the team physician but by another medic called in to the hotel.

Dean In Slump

Diz himself has been in somewhat of a slump recently and a week ago was nicked by the Cincinnati Reds for seven hits in three and a half innings. The Cubs bought him a year last Spring for $185,000 and three players from the St. Louis Cardinals but have recouped little except in publicity value.

FLEEING CONVICT HUNTED IN AUTO OF POLICE CHIEF

KANSAS CITY, July 17—The search for Jack Russell, escaped Oklahoma convict wanted for three kidnappings and a murder, swung to Kansas City today after a man answering his description commandeered a police car here and raced away.

A man believed to be the fugitive drove into a garage, pointed a revolver at the lone attendant, Huron Cox, a mechanic, and said: "I want this car."

He indicated the machine of Joseph F. Welsh, a police captain, then blindfolded Cox, forced him into the auto and drove out. Cox was shoved out of the car several blocks away.

Police said the car abandoned by the gunman looked like the one Russell was known to have been driving when last seen.

Meanwhile, search for Russell continued in Chicago and Iowa as local and federal authorities checked a maze of conflicting reports. Numerous "identifications" of the fugitive have from the first confused the search, which began last Tuesday when Russell escaped from the custody of an Oklahoma state prison guard in McAlester.

A man answering the description of Russell stopped early today at a cafe and filling station near the Johnson-Miami county line in Kansas. He bought eight gallons of gasoline, ordered a soft drink and washed his face before continuing southward toward Oklahoma.

The driver refused to let the filling station attendant raise the engine hood, beneath which is a police siren.

Ray Anderson, member of the fire department, is on vacation this week.

The Circleville Gun Club will hold a trap shoot at Gold Cliff Park Thursday night, July 20. A special shoot will be held for amateurs—Johnnie—get your gun! —ad.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hildenbrand of Pickaway township announce birth of a daughter, Monday, at their home.

The picnic of the Willing Workers' class of the Pontius United Brethren church will be Thursday, July 27, at the Stoutsville campground instead of Thursday, July 20, at Logan Elm Park.

The Rev. Father James Kirwin, of Port Arthur, Texas, has been called home because of the serious illness of his father, John Kirwin, who is a patient in University hospital, Columbus.

Miss Elizabeth Goode, of Washington township, employee of the division of aid for dependent children, is on vacation this week.

Mrs. Harriet Hennessy, stenographer in the county board of health office, is on vacation.

WILMINGTON MAN WOUNDS WIFE, 35, SHOTS HIMSELF

WILMINGTON, July 17—Turning a double-barreled shotgun on himself today after shooting his wife in the back, Frank P. Hamilton, 38, blew away part of his face. Hale hospital attendants said his recovery was doubtful. The wife, Mrs. Reba Hamilton, 35, will live.

Police Chief Edward Downing said Hamilton apparently hid in an outbuilding at his home and shot his wife while she pumped water at a well preparatory to doing a washing.

Downing said Hamilton had made repeated threats to kill Mrs. Hamilton and her mother, Mrs. William Clevenger.

The couple, married 20 years, has no children. Mrs. Hamilton filed a suit for divorce last week and Hamilton was believed to have become enraged at this action.

He secreted himself in the outbuilding before the arrival of Mrs. Hamilton and Mrs. Clevenger, Downing said.

AT TEXAS FUNERAL

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Buchwalter and Presley Buchwalter of Columbus are in Galveston, Tex., where they were called by the death of Mervil Buchwalter. The funeral was held in Galveston Monday. Mervil Buchwalter was a World War Veteran having served in Co. F of the Rainbow Division. The Buchwalter family formerly resided in Circleville.

CHIEF OF UNION, OTHERS FACING RIOTING CHARGE

and sympathizers, but troopers kept everyone moving and no large groups were permitted to gather.

Second Miner Dies

Death of the second miner yesterday added to the tension. He was Daniel Noe, a striker, who was shot in the gun fight between pickets and guardsmen at the Mahan-Ellison mine last Wednesday. Another miner, Dock Robinson, died almost instantly of gun wounds suffered in the battle, in which a National Guard captain and several others were hurt.

Meanwhile at Knoxville, Tenn., representatives of the U. M. W. and the Harlan County Coal Operators association were locked in conference seeking settlement of the issue that was the cause of all the trouble. Also present at the meeting was John L. Connor, federal labor department conciliator, who moved from one group to the other apparently without any immediate settlement in sight.

The issue, deadlocked for two months between the negotiators, was the demand of John L. Lewis, U. M. W. chief, for a "union shop" contract with the association, representing 20 mines now operating in Harlan without union contracts. To date, operators of these mines have refused to accede to the "union shop" demands, with the U. M. W. equally insistent that they must before any settlement can be made.

22 Sign Contracts

Twenty-two other mines in the county already have signed the U. M. W. contracts. As have most other mines in the Appalachian coal district. The Mahan-Ellison mine at which Wednesday's rioting occurred was one of those operating without a contract under national guard protection.

A non-union miner was beaten yesterday in the only violence reported for the day. He was John Tom Collins, 32, who told guardsmen that he was stopped near his home at Draper, Ky., by four men in an automobile who asked him to join a union. When he said he had never belonged to a union and didn't want to, they leaped out, "jumped on me, tore my clothes and tried to cut me with a knife," Collins reported.

Three killings Saturday night were not directly the result of the mine troubles, authorities said, although one of the deaths was indirectly attributable to the general tension. In the latter instance, guardsmen said, Willie Fee, a non-union miner, shot and killed Will Roberts, a striker, at the Mahan-Ellison workings. Fee said Roberts had been drinking and declared "I'm going to kill myself a few scabs tonight." Roberts jabbed a knife against his throat, Fee said, and he fired in self defense. Fee was charged with murder.

The other killing victims were Frank Bryant, 30, of Jellicoe, Tenn., a miner, and Bradley Simpson, another miner. Simpson was alleged to have shot Bryant, after which he in turn was shot by a friend of Bryant's. Bryant and Simpson had been fighting over a girl, it was said.

QUESTION: What time should tulip bulbs and peonies be transplanted?

ANSWER: Both tulips and peonies are planted in the Fall. The peonies usually in early September and the tulips in late September or early October.

QUESTION: My elm tree is dying, and I saw according to an article in the local newspaper that our city forester recommended that they could be saved by spraying. Can you please tell me what to spray them with?

ANSWER: I am afraid the city forester was misinformed since the several diseases that are attacking the elms here in Ohio are entirely internal and consequently no spray material has yet been devised which will have any effect whatsoever on these diseases. Occasionally, adequate watering and adequate fertilization may enable the tree to outgrow the disease. May I suggest that you consult a reliable tree man for this treatment.

QUESTION: I recently saw a vine growing on the side of a building which had leaves and flowers similar to the hydrangea. Can you tell me what this vine is?

ANSWER: I believe there is no question but what you saw the climbing hydrangea of which there are a number growing in the state. It is an unusually fine vine growing equally well in sun or shade. It clings to brick, stone, stucco, or wood. Since it is a little difficult to get established, it is best planted in the Spring.

QUESTION: Is it practical for a home gardener to grow his own roses from cuttings?

ANSWER: Although it is possible to grow roses from cuttings taken at this time of the year and rooted in a cold frame or under a glass jar, the plants obtained from them are seldom satisfactory. By far the best results are obtained from two-year-old northern-budded roses, preferably planted in the Spring.

QUESTION: I am having a terrific amount of trouble with moths in my lawn and flower beds. Although I have tried castor oil beans and moth balls, I have no success whatever. What would you recommend?

ANSWER: In addition to sending to your United States Congress for a copy of the U. S. Farmers' Bulletin 1247 on Moles as Pests, I would suggest that you try treating your lawn with arsenate of lead, using 10 pounds to each 1000 square feet of surface. If you will mix this with water and apply it with the watering can, you will have no difficulty whatever in putting it on. Some prefer to mix it with dry sand or rescuers expressed the opinion it was written Saturday.

Another note in a similar vein bore the notation "4:30," but again there was no date.

Leaders of the rescue crew said they thought at least some of the men had lived until some time yesterday.

Until the bodies were found this morning, it had been hoped the nine had built themselves a barricade against the gas, which was slowly being pumped from the mine.

Word of the find brought shrieks of anguish from several hundred relatives and friends of the trapped men, who had stood vigil throughout the day and night, praying that the men might be taken out alive.

The entry in which the bodies were found was almost half a mile from the point where the first 19 bodies were located. To reach the entry, rescuers had to travel almost three miles.

A few hours before the bodies were located, J. Daniel, state mine inspector at the scene, reported that the rescuers had found "dead air" near the entry, leading to hope the men might have barricaded their underground prison in such a way as to keep out the gas.

Attempts had been made to build a barricade, the rescuers said, but it was considered probable the men, weakened by inhaling the deadly gas had not been able to finish their task.

Thirty-eight men were working in the mine at the time of the explosion. Three men in one group made their way to a telephone and reported the accident. These and seven others near the bottom of the shaft escaped. All suffered ill effects from the gas.

On dwarf polyantha trees, all the pruning necessary is to cut the faded blooms to the first leaf and the plants will continue to bloom right up until frost.

NEUTRALITY ACT HOLDS KEY TO END OF SESSION

President And Lieutenants To Decide Course At Monday Confab.

prevent a vote on the kind of a neutrality the President wants. But a few ardent administration supporters and several anti-administration Democrats individually seeking adoption of legislation repealing all neutrality law, may still raise the issue in the senate.

Sen. King Asks Vote

Senator King (D) Utah, announced he would seek a vote on his measure repealing neutrality law despite the decision reached at today's conference. And the attitude of Senator Pepper (D) Florida, staunch administration adherent, was unknown pending announcement this morning. Pepper was not here when the committee voted against neutrality action, but has been a vigorous advocate of the legislation asked by Mr. Roosevelt, and could be counted on to make a fight for action at this session if the President insists.

EIGHT RUSSIAN PLANES ATTACK MANCHU REGION

HSINKING, July 17 — Eight Soviet planes from Outer Mongolia bombed the town of Halaharshan, 37 miles within Manchukuoan territory, in a surprise raid late last night, according to Domei official Japanese news agency dispatches reaching here today.

The raid, one of a series allegedly carried out by Soviet Outer Mongolian aviators in an effort to disrupt Manchukuoan railway and highway traffic, followed a formal Japanese protest to the Outer Mongolian and Soviet governments.

The protest specified that Russian planes had bombed and severely damaged an important Manchukuoan transportation center at Fularki, 185 miles north-west of Harbin. At least seven were reported injured in the bombing.

Families of Scouts and prospective Scouts attended the picnic.

REPORTERS OBTAIN STORY: IN CAGE OF SHOW LIONS

DETROIT, July 17 — Reporter Vera Brown and Photographer Howard Shirkey got a story for the Detroit Times today by walking into a lions' den. Accompanied by Captain Terrell Jacobs and his wife, Dolly, Miss Brown and Shirkey were an added attraction at Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey circus last night, walking into the lions' cage with the trainers.

During dry weather dahlias and gladioli should be kept well-watered, as the quality of the bloom will suffer if the plants are allowed to get too dry.

BREAK BETWEEN ROOSEVELT AND FARLEY HINTED

Efforts Of "Palace Guard" To Remove Big Jim Seen In McNutt Selection

KENNEDY MAY BE NAMED

Campaign Chief In Elections Ready To Visit Europe, Then Disclose Stand

WASHINGTON, July 17—Interest of national politics today centered on Postmaster General James A. Farley, awaiting his reaction to the efforts of the White House "palace guard" to purge him from the cabinet.

The purge movement became public over the weekend with revelation that inside New Dealers hope to replace him in the cabinet with Paul V. McNutt, newly-named Federal Security Administrator, who in turn would be replaced by a "brain-truster." In time, the New Dealers also hope to drive Farley out of the Democratic national chairmanship, replacing him with Joseph P. Kennedy, now ambassador to the court of St. James. Most politicians believe the fate of Farley is inevitably linked to the outcome of the 1940 presidential election.

Open Break Feared

Many Democrats fear party defeat in 1940 if the known coolness between President Roosevelt and Farley develops into an open break. Ardent New Dealers, hoping to blast Farley out of all party authority, however believe the President can be easily renominated with the present postmaster general on the sidelines and can be reelected without the aid of "genial Jim."

Some conservative Democrats hope Farley will break with the President, publicly and finally, and throw his support to the anti-New Deal factions now fighting a third term for Mr. Roosevelt or the nomination of any White-House-picked New Dealer. With Farley's militant aid, these conservatives feel they can block a third term nomination and pick their own 1940 nominee, even if it splits the party and brings defeat in 1940. At least, they say, they will have driven the New Dealers out of control of the party machinery.

Republican leaders see only victory next year if Farley is driven from the cabinet. They believe the G.O.P. will benefit with votes if the country pictures Farley as "martyrized" by the "brain-trust" after having won. Mr. Roosevelt the nomination in 1932 and successfully managed him into the presidency and an overwhelming reelection.

McNutt Choice Watched

There is no doubt among politicians that the President and Farley are on lukewarm terms. The President has ignored his postmaster general and national chairman in making major appointments. The Roosevelt choice of McNutt, open foe of Farley, for the coveted security administratorship is pictured by New Dealers and Farley's friends as an open slap at the postmaster general.

New Dealers say the presidential coolness toward Farley is due to the latter's failure to support Mr. Roosevelt on the supreme court bill and in the ill-fated purge of 1938. New Dealers have declaimed at length that the President could have won both the court fight and the purge campaigns if Farley had wholeheartedly supported him.

Farley's friends retort the President had his chance to win on both issues but lost them because they were doomed from the start and predicated on stupid politics. They add Farley has always been faithful and loyal to Roosevelt and will even support him warmly for a third term if the President comes out publicly for another term.

The "palace guard" however wants to purge Farley. They have fought him covertly ever since they achieved power within the New Deal. Now, they are openly on his trail, believing the Roosevelt appointment of McNutt, the Farley foe, is a sort of "green light" from the President himself. Farley remains silent. He plans an European tour, starting July 24. On his return, he may have something to say—that will make history within the Democratic party.

GARDEN FILLERS

Cucumbers, melons, cabbage and squashes are very apt to be attacked by leaf-eating bugs at this time. A spray of arsenate of lead should be applied so that both sides of the leaf are coated.

Shrubs may be propagated this month using greenwood cuttings. It is worth while to try one of the hormone preparations now on the market as a means of hastening and stimulating root development. This treatment is important in commercial nursery practice, but amateur gardeners will also find it useful.

Who Has 6,000 Enemies?

THE film, "6,000 Enemies", co-starring Walter Pidgeon and Rita Johnson, starts Wednesday at the Clifont theatre.

The Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

Hanes was making a statement before a congressional committee when the official announcement came from the White House of McNutt's appointment as Federal Security Administrator.

The Washington news ticker interrupted itself in recording Hanes to send a flash on the McNutt appointment. Then it resumed with Hanes' remarks, dealing with the problem of tax exempt bonds. This is the way the news appeared:

Flash — McNutt appointed Securities Administrator. "If that's the best we can do," Hanes said, "we'll have to take it."

DOC TOWNSEND

Inside fact is that Dr. Francis Townsend had to write that letter to Claude Pepper asking the Florida Senator not to offer the old-age pension plan during the Senate's consideration of social security amendments.

The "old Doc" didn't want to write it, but that was the only way he could induce Pepper to withhold the pension scheme. Pepper wasn't taking any chances with the crafty old age crusader, sought no responsibility for delaying the bill.

It was no secret to Senate Townsends that the "old Doc" had secretly conferred with Republican floor leaders who had urged him strongly not to bring up his scheme at this session. So when Townsend first proposed this to his Democratic followers, they were extremely frigid and indicated that they intended to offer the bill regardless of his request to postpone it.

Townsend renewed his pleas at his Indianapolis convention. Again he got nowhere, it being made clear to him that if he wanted the measure shelved he had to say so publicly. With no other way out, Dr. Townsend finally bowed and wrote the withdrawal letter.

KINGS AND DICTATORS

The King of England had no more protection during his Washington visit than the Dictator of the Dominican Republic, Generalissimo Rafael Trujillo. Principal difference is that the protection in this case is not provided by U. S. officials.

When Trujillo arrived in Washington, the Dominican Legation was transformed. Everything and everybody was suspect. When the delivery boy arrived with the day's groceries, every box and package was examined by detectives. When news photographers came to the Legation, detectives inspected the camera cases, looking for hidden bombs.

Trujillo has a mild manner and an ingratiating smile when he is on display, but there are too many Dominican exiles in Puerto Rico and the United States who remember that his manner is not always mild. When Trujillo goes to bed at night, a detective hired from the New York police force spends the night outside the Dictator's door.

TVA ROW ENDED

Quietly being worked out by Comptroller General Fred Brown is a new rapprochement between the General Accounting Office and its ancient enemy, the Tennessee Valley Authority. It will completely end the old feud between TVA and McCarl.

In McCarl's mind, TVA was something essentially evil. He disapproved of it as a matter of policy, therefore did everything he could, consciously or unconsciously, to obstruct it. One of his tactics was to require all TVA vouchers (literally carloads) to be sent to Washington for General Accounting Office inspection.

Now this policy has been reversed. Ex-Senator Brown made TVA accounting history last week when he dispatched GAO accountants to Knoxville to do the auditing on the scene. He figured it would be quicker, cheaper, and cause less trouble for the TVA.

CHILLICOTHEAN APPOINTED N. Y. A. AREA SUPERVISOR

The appointment of Lucien F. Jenness, Chillicothe, as N. Y. A. area supervisor for Ross, Fayette and Pickaway counties, was announced today by A. Bruce Musick, supervisor, District No. 6, National Youth Administration in Ohio. Mr. Jenness succeeds Thomas J. Hughes who resigned in April. The area office is located in the City Building, Chillicothe.

The new supervisor is a graduate of Ohio State university, where he was a member of Sigma Delta Chi, honorary journalistic fraternity. Since his graduation he has been on the staffs of the Scioto Gazette and the Chillicothe News-Advertiser in both the editorial and advertising departments and more recently was district manager with the Unemployment Compensation Commission of Ohio. As a member of the Chillicothe Lions' Club and the Council of Social Agencies, Mr. Jenness has taken an active interest in civic and welfare programs.

He is married and has two children, Dorothy Ann, and Bartlett.

FARM NEWS

Brief Items of Interest to Pickaway Farmers

The Ohio Apple Institute, W. B. Baughman, New Concord, secretary, is leading a campaign to assist Ohio growers in disposing profitably of this year's apple crop.

Consumption of water on Ohio farms shows an increase of 3,000 gallons or more a month when the method of securing it is changed from pumping by hand to turning faucets in a modern water system.

Of approximately 112,500,000 bushels of United States wheat and flour exported between July 1, 1938, and May 31, 1939, there were 88,000,000 bushels sold under the federal export program supervised by the Department of Agriculture.

The animal husbandry department at Ohio State University is in Plumb Hall, the main office and class building having been named in honor of the late Professor Charles Summer Plumb who served the University and citizens of Ohio for 37 years.

Present information indicates that the 1939 pig crop, which includes both Fall and Spring litters, will total 83,000,000 head. This will exceed the 1938 figure by nearly 12,000,000 and will lack only 1,000,000 of equalling the record production in 1933.

PETITIONS FOR GENERAL MARX READY TO FILE

COLUMBUS, July 17—Bearing 147,000 signatures, referendum petitions seeking to place the adjutant general life-tenureship question on the ballot in November will be filed with the secretary of state before the 6:30 p. m. deadline tonight. Frank Kirwin, secretary of the Ohio Non-Partisan Defense League, announced today.

If the petitions are not filed today, the Fleckner bill which abolishes life tenureship of Adjutant General Emil F. Marx, St. Marys Democrat, will go into effect immediately and enable Gov. John W. Bricker to appoint a successor.

Purpose of the proposed referendum is to upset the Fleckner bill and enable Marx, appointed by former Gov. Martin L. Davey, to continue in his post.

FOUR VETERANS AT CONVENTION IN PORTSMOUTH

Karl Herrmann, commander of Howard Hall post, American Legion; James Shea and E. C. Ebert, delegates and Lorin Dudleson, alternate, attended the district Legion convention held Sunday in Portsmouth. Ben Segal, of Chillicothe district commander, presided at the sessions.

Twelve of the 21 posts in the district were represented. Two delegates were selected to represent the district at the national convention in September. Mr. Segal and Cliff Baker, Portsmouth, are delegates and R. B. Tharp, Washington C. H., and Dudley E. Whipple, Portsmouth, alternates. Thomas W. McCaw, past state commander, was the principal speaker.

PETITIONS FOR GENERAL MARX READY TO FILE

COLUMBUS, July 17—Bearing 147,000 signatures, referendum petitions seeking to place the adjutant general life-tenureship question on the ballot in November will be filed with the secretary of state before the 6:30 p. m. deadline tonight, Frank Kirwin, secretary of the Ohio Non-Partisan Defense League, announced today.

If the petitions are not filed today, the Fleckner bill which abolishes life tenureship of Adjutant General Emil F. Marx, St. Marys Democrat, will go into effect immediately and enable Gov. John W. Bricker to appoint a successor.

Purpose of the proposed referendum is to upset the Fleckner bill and enable Marx, appointed by former Gov. Martin L. Davey, to continue in his post.

RULES FOR ABUSING WIVES

THE only reason why some men are interfered with by the law in the legitimate sport of browbeating their wives, it appears, is that they are careless in their technique. According to a ruling by a New York magistrate, the man who wants to swear at his wife and call her insulting names can get away with it "if it is done in the privacy of his home." In the case in question, explained Magistrate Charles Solomon in the Bridge Plaza Court of Brooklyn, the wife had no recourse because the abusive epithets had been applied in the family kitchen and not outside.

"Disorderly conduct must cause or tend to cause a breach of public peace," he stated. "I believe this woman's story, but I have no choice but to dismiss. Had she run into the street, and had her husband chased her and said the same things that he did in the kitchen, I would hold that there had been disorderly conduct."

A man's house, apparently, is still "his castle", within whose walls he may do pretty much as he likes. A private breach of the peace, such as bawling out one's wife or husband, is none of the law's business, no matter what the "in-laws" may have to say about it. The police are not justified in stepping in. The only recourse, apparently, is the divorce court, which has grown more sympathetic in such matters.

LIFE IMPROVEMENT

IT is a remarkable fact that, as reported by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, the death rate among industrial policy-holders last year was the lowest on record. This report does not represent a cross-section of the whole nation, but it certainly suggests that, in spite of the difficulties of these depression years, we are somehow or other taking better care of our people in fundamental ways.

The same impression is given by Census Bureau figures of population trends. It has become customary to expect a slowing down of growth, resulting perhaps in a static population a generation hence. But the new figures show that our national birth rate has now risen for the second consecutive year, being last year 17.6 percent as against a low of 16.7 in 1936.

Hopeless and decadent nations produce fewer children. Hopeful and energetic nations produce more. We might conclude from these figures, along with various other facts, that our nation not only has preserved its virility but, even while economically baffled and "torn by many doubts", we are still a young and vigorous people.

Denmark, now much admired by Americans, seems to get along so well not because it's very rich, but because it has a unified spirit and a balanced economy.

The great thing about weather is the chance it gives people to complain.

World At A Glance

IT'S A MISTAKE to assume that ALL congress wants to adjourn and go home on account of Washington's well-known hot summer weather. The longer the session strings along, the better the Republican senators and representatives like it. To be sure, they pant and perspire and suffer physically. But they realize that the Democrats are suffering a good deal worse politically. They can stand any amount of meteorological humidity in competition with the Democrats' still more terrific degree of intra-party humidity.

The Democrats have been split wide open on:
The money bill.
Neutrality.
Self-liquidating expenditures.
Deficits and the 40-billion-and-odd national indebtedness.
The third term issue.
Also various other things too numerous to mention.

They desperately want to quit and scatter, leaving these disputes to sizzle for a few months. They won't sizzle entirely out, but they may sizzle DOWN a bit. When they begin to RE-sizzle next January the Democratic leadership will have a little rest, anyway. Rest is just what the G. O. P. management doesn't want to give its opponents. A scrapper, seeing his antagonist showing signs of grogginess, naturally is opposed to taking a recess, to give the latter the time to recuperate.

SPLIT AND SPLITS

The congressional Republicans, though in a seemingly hopeless minority, are all but solid. Senator G. O. P. Leader McNary hasn't a recalcitrant except, occasionally, Senator Borah. Borah, from McNary's standpoint, often is a mean customer. Still, he's only one in number.

Senator Norris doesn't count. ONCE he was a Republican, and now virtually he's a New Dealer, but he quit being a Republican quite a while ago, and today officially is an Independent; not a G. O. P. rebel.

Senator La Follette in effect is an administration Democrat, but he NEVER was a Republican, but a Progressive. So he's no G. O. P. seceder.

Nor can Leader McNary gamble on Senators Shipstead and Lundeen (Farmer-Laborites). But

NEUTRALITY BEATEN IN COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON—Real key man in the Senate battle preceding the Foreign Relations Committee vote against the neutrality bill was that old battle-scarred veteran, William E. Borah.

The headlines went to George of Georgia and Gillette of Iowa, the two fence-straddlers who at the last moment flopped to the isolationists and turned the tide in their favor, 12 to 11. But actually it was the Idaho lion who decided the issue. Here is the untold inside story:

Although adamantly opposed to Roosevelt-Hull neutrality views, Borah is not a filibusterer. Throughout his 32 years in the Senate he has never participated in a filibuster, because he believes a minority does not have the right in a democracy to block majority action.

The day before the committee meeting he called the leaders of the isolationist bloc to his office and told them he thought they should not pocket the neutrality bill in the committee. Borah took the position that the legislation was of vital importance to the nation, and that the public would resent having the matter settled in the secrecy of a committee room by a small part of the Senate's membership. He counseled allowing the issue to go before the entire Senate for full debate and a vote.

Several of the leaders were inclined to agree with him, but no decision was reached at this meeting. This was in the morning. In the afternoon, Borah renewed his effort in personal talks with individual members of the group.

TOO HOT FOR BORAH

Die-hards of the bloc became alarmed. After hasty consultation, they decided that unless something was done quickly, Borah would scuttle any hope they had of pigeon-holing the legislation and thus saving themselves the strain and onus of a filibuster.

So Senator Bennett Clark, Missouri New Deal-hater, was picked to explain the situation to George and Gillette and ask their cooperation by removing any doubt of how they would vote. This, Clark argued, would stiffen the backs of the waverers. With Gillette and George definitely in line, the anti-administrationites would have a close but sure majority.

The two purge-beaters promptly assured Clark they would vote with him, on one condition: that no hint leak to the White House. Clark gave his word and rushed back to his colleagues with the glad news.

That finished Borah. The waverers scrambled back into line and he found himself standing alone. The spot was too hot for him. He, too, backed down. Had he stood pat and voted his private convictions, the victory would have gone the other way.

NOTE—Although both hotly deny it, the Senate generally credits personal spleen against Roosevelt for the votes of George and Gillette.

DIET AND HEALTH

Why Exercise Benefits Health

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

EXERCISE is par excellence the hygienic opportunity of summer. Its effects are observable on the circulation, the digestion, on the functions of elimination and on respiration.

Exercise increases the rate and force of the heart contraction. Exercises of speed increase the pulse rate and step up the output of the heart. McCurdy found that after a fast 100-yard dash the output was increased 37 per cent; after a quarter-mile it was increased 86 per cent. Exercises of strength, such as weight lifting, do not increase the pulse rate, but do increase the output. Exercises of endurance have an effect somewhere in between the other two—they increase the rate somewhat, but less than exercises of speed.

The composition of the blood is somewhat changed after exercise. There is a slight swing towards acidity, a decrease in the bicarbonate of the plasma. But this is very transitory and really is probably a beneficial chemical result. The cause is that lactic acid is formed when a muscle contracts.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Pressure Raised
Blood pressure is raised moderately by exercise, but there is a rapid return to normal. The total effect is beneficial.

On digestion the chief effect is to increase the appetite. Abdominal exercise increases the movement of the food through the intestines by a massage as the muscles contract and relax. The increased supply of oxygen to the brain during exercise is also helpful to the glands which secrete the digestive juices.

Elimination is increased by exercise by its effect on the circulation and the respiration. Water and salts are eliminated by the skin. The lungs eliminate gases under exercise. After a strenuous game of tennis, football or polo, it is quite possible that the athlete will be ten pounds lighter.

There is a superstition among baseball players and in similar sports that no water should be swallowed during a game or match. All the physiological evidence we have acquired points the other way. It might be that a player could drink enough to slow him down, but it is not likely, and the theatrical gargling and spitting that are noted so often in the limelight are unnecessary.

Muscle Efficiency
Efficiency of the muscles is unquestionably the most notable result of exercise. Teamwork between the muscles and nerves is promoted. It is really one of the most marvelous phenomena in nature to see how beautifully adapted to their functions muscles can become by training.

As a result of muscular activity, all the functions of the body respond. As soon as exercise begins, the carbonic output is increased and when concentration in the blood reaches the respiratory center, there is an SOS for more oxygen. The heart beats faster, the diaphragm works harder and faster, and the entire body is keyed up to a higher pitch.

Sleep is affected by exercise in two ways. If the exercise is moderate and proper, sleep is induced. But it is certainly true that one can be "too tired to sleep." The heart may be so disturbed by exercise that you lie awake and listen to the shaking of the bed.

The immediate effect of exercise on the muscle is to increase the temperature and the size. The ultimate effect is hypertrophy, or increase, both in the gross size and in the size of the individual fibers.

Wings of Youth

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

By HELEN WELSHIMER

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

SO THE AUTUMN flights began. And in the excitement of the barn-storming, Sarah Anne forgot the moment that school opened the second week in September.

It was brought to her attention forcibly. Judy was waving a newspaper as she came into the Victoria hotel, the leading hostelry of a small county seat.

"Watch the crowds pour in today," Judy said cheerfully. "Look!" Sarah Anne accepted the paper, thinking that the fair press agent had thought of a clever peg on which to hang a new story. Then her eyes widened.

She didn't see her face or Judy's or an airplane. She saw a row of little children, carrying placards, marching. There was Bobbie Miller. And Betty Jane Fuller and Ethel Newton and—Her eyes were dewy and star-bright when she finished the story. The children, promoted to third grade at her old building, had asked for her as their teacher, and gone on strike with placards written in their childish scrawl.

"We won't go to school until Miss Melton comes back. We want Miss Melton."

The letters straggled. The spelling wasn't right. But the children loved her. They hadn't forgotten that story telling hour around the fireplace in the church reading room, or the pageants in which she had coached them. Suddenly she was homesick. She wanted to enter a classroom, close a brown door, and open green doors and red doors and yellow doors of magic to a room of children. Only she couldn't. Never again.

But the picture in the paper went with her to the assembly ground that afternoon. It stayed in the back of her mind as she put on her own white flying suit and attended to her parachutes.

She felt tired. She wondered if she had been straining herself too much lately. But that was foolish. Anyone could slide out of a ship. There was nothing to it. Once she had skinned her knee, but that might have happened by bumping into a chair in the dark or slipping on a banana-peel.

She wished there was someone to whom she could talk. Someone besides Judy. Judy was intuitive. She had been attempting to shorten the schedule. And Judy wasn't nappy. She had a habit of running every field as though she might catch sight of a tanned face and sun-burned hair. But Jack did not come, nor did he write.

It was unusually warm and the band was playing unusually loud. The smell of buttered popcorn was filling the air and the sun was sending its beams straight down. She would be glad when this jump was over.

The ship took off. Judy had removed the cabin door in order to facilitate that escape into space. The announcer was busy with his explanations and forecasts of the coming jump. Listening, Sarah Anne felt a little ashamed. This was such an uneventful thing she did. Not at all brilliant like the feats of Bob and Jack and Bernice. Maybe she did not belong in their sky. Maybe only the sweep of the clouds and the vista of the stars, as seen from the earth, was hers. But this was no time to think of that.

They must circle the field three times, rising higher every evolution, until they came to the place where the parachute jump would be made.

She looked up. Seven miles above, or 36,000 feet, was as high as man could climb. Beyond that the pressure was too great for him or his ship. But maybe up there freedom rode the wind. It was just here, in the flare and glare of the carnival, that the sky was deceptive. You were aloft but not free. She wished that Judy would start up.

Then she leaned toward the radio, over which the announcer's voice was coming clearly. She came to swift attention.

The man was saying: "We are honored today to have with us two distinguished members of aviation's illustrious company—Robert Kennedy and Jack Courtney, who is known to all of you for his Tokio-San Francisco hop last June."

The plane wobbled. So Judy was experiencing a double somersault in the region of her stomach, too, was she?

That voice continued: "The gentlemen came down for gas, on their way southward, and have consented to give us the honor of their presence. It's lucky for us they chose this as their refueling station. And now, ladies and gentlemen, if you will again gaze into the air—"

The plane was doing no wobbling now. It was going swift and straight. Sarah Anne saw the smoldering fire in Judy's eyes. Together they had agreed to dream that the two aviators had come to see them, and all the men wanted was to fill their gasoline tank. Accidental meeting, that was all.

She must not care. She had made herself realize that her brave, new horizon would not hold Bob. Yet, as the plane came around on that final circle, Bob's face floated before her. Not the face with the narrowed, unsympathetic eyes that she had seen the night she rescued Corrinne's letters. But the face of that early morning in the shadow of the church tower when he had said:

"When all of this is over . . . let's start a friendship from scratch."

She tried to banish that face, to substitute instead the parade of small boys and girls who hadn't forgotten her.

"Your signal," Judy said gently, as a bugle sounded.

"I'm off," she answered. Head first, feet to her back. The wind tore her breath from her. She hadn't realized such a current was in the air today. No wonder the men had needed more gas. Well, she must pull the rip cord.

But her hand didn't want to work. It felt curiously numb. That was odd. All of her life it had worked—playing the piano, grading papers, wiping dishes. And they weren't at all important. But this was. This was life, or maybe death.

The world below was jumping up to meet her. She was hurtling through space and her hand wouldn't work!

Then the cloudy wisps of memory cleared away and the merciless, stark truth stared her in the face. She was going to crash if that parasol on her chute didn't blossom out instantly. She put both hands on it and pulled. The numbness broke. The great balloon began to open.

She was supported by the drift of the wind. She glanced down and shuddered at the nearness of the earth. In one second more, or at the most five, it might have been too late.

She was still and frightened, yet the danger did not seem to be a visible thing. She had come through. New horizons—

She wasn't quite conscious when she reached the ground. She knew that people were removing her parachute and she heard the announcer's voice explaining the importance of her jump as though she had waited so long on purpose.

She came back to reality. Oh, that was good! Bob would never know what had happened to her. He would think that she had tried a dare-devil stunt.

When Jack and Bob reached her, she was standing erect, her face a little white, but perfectly controlled. She smiled at them.

"Hello," Bob said briefly.

"Hello. I didn't expect such a famous audience."

"Why did you take such a chance?" Jack asked. "Don't you know better than that?" He began to lecture.

Bob hadn't spoken after that first greeting. It was Jack who was interested in her danger. Not—not Bob.

But suddenly Bob's voice spoke with such swiftness it was almost harsh.

"Chance? Good grief, man, didn't you see what happened? She had jumper's paralysis for a moment. She couldn't open the blamed thing."

She hadn't meant to admit it, but her eyes were filled with surprise at his understanding as she looked at him.

Suddenly Bob seized her by the shoulders and began to shake her.

WASHINGTON—Real key man in the Senate battle preceding the Foreign Relations Committee vote against the neutrality bill was that old battle-scarred veteran, William E. Borah.

The headlines went to George of Georgia and Gillette of Iowa, the two fence-straddlers who at the last moment flopped to the isolationists and turned the tide in their favor, 12 to 11. But actually it was the Idaho lion who decided the issue. Here is the untold inside story:

Although adamantly opposed to Roosevelt-Hull neutrality views, Borah is not a filibusterer. Throughout his 32 years in the Senate he has never participated in a filibuster, because he believes a minority does not have the right in a democracy to block majority action.

The day before the committee meeting he called the leaders of the isolationist bloc to his office and told them he thought they should not pocket the neutrality bill in the committee. Borah took the position that the legislation was of vital importance to the nation, and that the public would resent having the matter settled in the secrecy of a committee room by a small part of the Senate's membership. He counseled allowing the issue to go before the entire Senate for full debate and a vote.

Several of the leaders were inclined to agree with him, but no decision was reached at this meeting. This was in the morning. In the afternoon, Borah renewed his effort in personal talks with individual members of the group.

TOO HOT FOR BORAH

Die-hards of the bloc became alarmed. After hasty consultation, they decided that unless something was done quickly, Borah would scuttle any hope they had of pigeon-holing the legislation and thus saving themselves the strain and onus of a filibuster.

So Senator Bennett Clark, Missouri New Deal-hater, was picked to explain the situation to George and Gillette and ask their cooperation by removing any doubt of how they would vote. This, Clark argued, would stiffen the backs of the waverers. With Gillette and George definitely in line, the anti-Administrationites would have a close but sure majority.

The two purge-beaters promptly assured Clark they would vote with him, on one condition: that no hint leak to the White House. Clark gave his word and rushed back to his colleagues with the glad news.

That finished Borah. The waverers scrambled back into line and he found himself standing alone. The spot was too hot for him. He, too, backed down. Had he stood pat and voted his private convictions, the victory would have gone the other way.

NOTE—Although both hotly deny it, the Senate generally credits personal spleen against Roosevelt for the votes of George and Gillette.

DIET AND HEALTH

Why Exercise Benefits Health

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

EXERCISE is par excellence the hygienic opportunity of summer. Its effects are observable on the circulation, the digestion, on the functions of elimination and on respiration.

Exercise increases the rate and force of the heart contraction. Exercises of speed increase the pulse rate and step up the output of the heart. McCurdy found that after a fast 100-yard dash the output was increased 37 per cent; after a quarter-mile it was increased 86 per cent.

Exercises of strength, such as weight lifting, do not increase the pulse rate, but do increase the output. Exercises of endurance have an effect somewhere in between the other two—they increase the rate somewhat, but less than exercises of speed.

The composition of the blood is somewhat changed after exercise. There is a slight swing towards acidity, a decrease in the bicarbonates of the plasma. But this is very transitory and really is probably a beneficial chemical result. The cause is that lactic acid is formed when a muscle contracts.

Pressure Raised
Blood pressure is raised moderately by exercise, but there is a rapid return to normal. The total effect is beneficial.

On digestion the chief effect is to increase the appetite. Abdominal exercise increases the movement of the food through the intestines by a massage as the muscles contract and relax. The increased supply of oxygen to the brain during exercise is also helpful to the glands which secrete the digestive juices.

Elimination is increased by exercise by its effect on the circulation and the respiration. Water and salts are eliminated by the skin. The lungs eliminate gases under exercise. After a strenuous game of tennis, football or polo, it is quite

STARS SAY—

For Monday, July 17
MONDAY'S astrological forecast promises great opportunity for attaining important objectives. But these are jeopardized as overzealous and strenuous impulses, as well as by treachery, deceit and sinister under-currents. Vigilance and self-restraint are admonished.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of great opportunity for progress, financial expansion and personal prestige. But there may be snares to be overcome by wariness and sagacity. Impetuosity, strife and over-enthusiasm may be detrimental. Calmness, vigilance and caution reap rich rewards.

A child born on this day may have great ambitions and aspirations, with much enterprise and initiative. But over-enthusiasm may bring defeat through excitement, high-pressure tactics and impetuosity. It should be friendly, benevolent and profound; also cheerful and genial, winning much personal popularity and affection.

Wings of Youth
By HELEN WELSHIMER
WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE
SO THE AUTUMN flights began. And in the excitement of the barn-storming, Sarah Anne forgot the moment that school opened the second week in September.

It was brought to her attention forcibly. Judy was waving a newspaper as she came into the Victoria hotel, the leading hostelry of a small county seat.

"Watch the crowds pour in today," Judy said cheerfully. "Look!" Sarah Anne accepted the paper, thinking that the fair press agent had thought of a clever peg on which to hang a new story. Then her eyes widened.

She didn't see her face or Judy's or an airplane. She saw a row of little children, carrying placards, marching. There was Bobbie Miller, And Betty Jane Fuller and Ethel Newton and—Her eyes were dewy and star-bright when she finished the story. The children, promoted to third grade at her old building, had asked for her as their teacher, and gone on strike with placards written in their childish scrawl.

"We won't go to school until Miss Melton comes back. We want Miss Melton."

The letters straggled. The spelling wasn't right. But the children oved her. They hadn't forgotten that story telling hour around the fireplace in the church reading room, or the pageants in which she had coached them. Suddenly she was homesick. She wanted to enter a classroom, close a brown door, and open green doors and red doors and yellow doors of magic to a room of children. Only she couldn't. Never again.

But the picture in the paper went with her to the assembly ground that afternoon. It stayed in the back of her mind as she put on her own white flying suit and attended to her parachutes.

She felt tired. She wondered if she had been straining herself too much lately. But that was foolish. Anyone could slide out of a ship. There was nothing to it. Once she had skinned her knees, but that might have happened by bumping into a chair in the dark or slipping on a banana peel.

She wished there was someone to whom she could talk. Someone besides Judy. Judy was intuitive. She had been attempting to shorten the schedule. And Judy wasn't nappy. She had a habit of bumping every field as though she might catch sight of a tanned face and sun-burned hair. But Jack did not come, nor did he write.

It was unusually warm and the band was playing unusually loud. The smell of buttered popcorn was filling the air and the sun was sending its beams straight down. She would be glad when this jump was over.

The ship took off. Judy had removed the cabin door in order to facilitate that escape into space. The announcer was busy with his explanations and forecasts of the coming jump. Listening, Sarah Anne felt a little ashamed. This was such an uneventful thing she did. Not at all brilliant like the feats of Bob and Jack and Bernice. Maybe she did not belong in their sky. Maybe only the sweep of the clouds and the vista of the stars, as seen from the earth, was hers. But this was no time to think of that.

She looked up. Seven miles above, or 36,000 feet, was as high as man could climb. Beyond that the pressure was too great for him or his ship. But maybe up there freedom rode the wind. It was just here, in the flare and glare of the carnival, that the sky was deceptive. You were aloft but not free. She wished that Judy would start up.

Then she leaned toward the radio, over which the announcer's voice was coming clearly. She came to swift attention.

The man was saying: "We are honored today to have with us two distinguished members of aviation's illustrious company—Robert Kennedy and Jack Courtney, who is known to all of you for his Tokio-San Francisco hop last June."

The plane wobbled. So Judy was experiencing a double somersault in the region of her stomach, too, was she?

That voice continued: "The gentlemen came down for gas, on their way southward, and have consented to give us the honor of their presence. It's lucky for us they chose this as their refueling station. And now, ladies and gentlemen, if you will again gaze into the air—"

The plane was doing no wobbling now. It was going swift and straight. Sarah Anne saw the smoldering fire in Judy's eyes.

Together they had dared to dream that the two aviators had come to see them, and all the men wanted was to fill their gasoline tank. Accidental meeting, that was all.

She must not care. She had made herself realize that her brave, new horizon would not hold Bob. Yet, as the plane came around on that final circle, Bob's face floated before her. Not the face with the narrow, unsympathetic eyes that she had seen the night she rescued Corrinne's letters. But the face of that early morning in the shadow of the church tower when he had said:

"When all of this is over... let's start a friendship from scratch."

She tried to banish that face, to substitute instead the parade of small boys and girls who hadn't forgotten her.

Gladioli Show

Plans for the Gladioli Show of the Pickaway County Garden club which was to be Wednesday at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Howard Jones, Park Place, have been changed, the show to be held Wednesday, July 26. The arrangements for the show will be the same. The later date was chosen since the cool nights have retarded the blossoming of the plants.

It is requested that all entries be in by noon of that day. The entries will be received in the following classes:

Class 1. Best specimen of any variety of gladioli.

Class 2. Greatest variety of colors.

Class 3. Most artistic arrangement.

Class 4. Best display of any varieties of flowers by members of Junior Garden Clubs.

Any resident of Pickaway county is welcome to compete. Prizes will be awarded.

Transplanting Ferns Successfully

Ferns may be transplanted at any time of year, even during mid-summer. This is perhaps the most suitable time, as they have reached maturity and the gardener can see their height and form.

As shown in the Garden-Graph, those ferns which have a short, thick rootstock should be transplanted with at least two inches of the old rootstock attached to the crown so that the plant is not starved by lack of rootlets. Also leave the dead last-year's stalks attached. In this group are the Woodferns, Christmas Fern and Ostrich Fern.

Do not move fern from moist shady situation to a sunny one. Ferns are not adaptable and even nursery stock must be maintained in its natural habitat.

Christ Church Society Conducts Picnic Outing

Nearly 50 Gather
At Barthelmas
Residence

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Barthelmas of near Williamsport were hosts Sunday to the members of the Young People's society of Christ Lutheran church when they met in their home for a picnic outing.

Forty-one members and guests gathered at the Barthelmas home and enjoyed out-of-doors games and contests during the afternoon and evening.

Late supper was served from a buffet table on the side porch, the guests finding places at the long tables placed on the lawn of the home.

Mrs. Van Meter Hulse, Mrs. Lyle Davis and Junior Barthelmas were responsible for the entertainment for the affair.

Circleville guests at the picnic party included the Rev. and Mrs. George Troutman and family, Miss Roma Melvin, Miss Doris Griffith and Gladden Troutman.

D. A. C. to Meet
The Colonel William Ball chapter of the Daughters of American Colonists will have its July session Wednesday, July 19, in the home of Mrs. Oscar Finley, Waterloo Road, Route 277, near Mt. Sterling. A cooperative luncheon will be served at noon followed by the business session of the chapter.

Annual Picnic
A group of friends and relatives gathered Sunday at Stony Creek Park, near Waverly, and enjoyed an annual get together and picnic.

Included in the party were Mrs. Stella Spangler of Watt street; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Smith and family of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. John Deubig of Marion; Mr. and Mrs. Girard C. Kemp and family of Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Fuch and family and Mr. and Mrs. Dan Harness and family of Chillicothe.

Mrs. Powell of Chicago remained for a longer visit with her sister, Mrs. Cady.

Gladioli Show
Plans for the Gladioli Show of the Pickaway County Garden club which was to be Wednesday at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Howard Jones, Park Place, have been changed, the show to be held Wednesday, July 26. The arrangements for the show will be the same. The later date was chosen since the cool nights have retarded the blossoming of the plants.

It is requested that all entries be in by noon of that day. The entries will be received in the following classes:

Class 1. Best specimen of any variety of gladioli.

Class 2. Greatest variety of colors.

Class 3. Most artistic arrangement.

Class 4. Best display of any varieties of flowers by members of Junior Garden Clubs.

Any resident of Pickaway county is welcome to compete. Prizes will be awarded.

January Marriage Announced
Mr. and Mrs. George Hanley of Washington township announce the marriage of their daughter, Harriett, to Mr. Floyd Burchwell, son of Mrs. Nola Burchwell of W. Main

Transplanting Ferns Successfully

Ferns may be transplanted at any time of year, even during mid-summer. This is perhaps the most suitable time, as they have reached maturity and the gardener can see their height and form.

As shown in the Garden-Graph, those ferns which have a short, thick rootstock should be transplanted with at least two inches of the old rootstock attached to the crown so that the plant is not starved by lack of rootlets. Also leave the dead last-year's stalks attached. In this group are the Woodferns, Christmas Fern and Ostrich Fern.

Do not move fern from moist shady situation to a sunny one. Ferns are not adaptable and even nursery stock must be maintained in its natural habitat.

family of five by singing in contests will relate their experiences on Gabriel Heatter's "We, The People", Tuesday, July 18, over the WABC-Columbia network, at 8 p. m.

Lonesome without her steeplejack husband, Mrs. Charles Miner resigned from the role of a housewife and became the world's only feminine steeplejack so she could work side-by-side with her husband. Mr. Miner also will appear on the program.

RADIO NEWS IN BRIEF

GIANTS' MORALE

DOWN AS JURGES GOES TO BENCH

BOSTON, July 17.—The morale of the New York Giants was badly bent today as a result of the 10 days suspension handed Shortstop Billy Jurges which shattered the club's infield and reduced it to a makeshift combination.

Jurges was one of four men who suffered the ire of League President C. B. Fry for the brawl staged in the Giants-Reds ball game Saturday.

Umpire George Magerkurth was fined $150 and suspended for 10 days for taking a punch at Jurges. The identical sentence was handed to Jurges for taking a swipe at Magerkurth.

Catcher Harry Danning was fined $50 for shoving Umpire Lee Ballanfant while protesting that Harry Craft's eighth inning homer which decided the game for the Reds was a foul. Terry was fined $50 for failure to "cooperate in handling the situation."

During Jurges' absence, Terry said the Giants will rely on what he calls his "dream infield" of Lou Chiozza at shortstop and Mel Ott at third base. Neither will be playing in his natural position.

N. HOLLAND ACE TAKES ONE-HIT CONTEST, 3 TO 0

Ross, ace of the New Holland baseball team, turned in his outstanding performance of the year Sunday in defeating the Harveysburg team, 3-0, and granting only one safety. Ross fanned 15 batters while walking two men.

The New Hollanders connected for five hits, Art Walker contributing the big blow, a triple. The team backed by Mike Helfrich went through the nine innings without an error, providing excellent support for its hurler at several different times in the game.

PORTSMOUTH ARRANGES NEW GATE ATTRACTION

PORTSMOUTH, July 17.—Something new and different in an effort to draw the male baseball fans through the turnstiles!

Wednesday night will be "Men's Night" at the Portsmouth Red Bird stadium. Each man accompanied by a woman will be admitted free of charge, Sam Pollitano, business manager of the Birds, announced today.

The innovation is a take-off on "Ladies Days" which have been an institution in most baseball leagues for many years.

Jacobs To Leave For Detroit To Plan Bout

NEW YORK, July 17.—Mr. Boxing, whose other name is Mike Jacobs, was in rare good humor as he prepared to leave today for Detroit where he will be joined Wednesday by Bob Pastor and Jimmy Johnston for a formal signing before the athletic commission for a title fight between Joe Louis and the aforesaid Pastor.

Mike's happiness stems from the fact that all annoying wrinkles have been smoothly ironed out and from the additional fact that he sees a large profit for Uncle Michael in the immediate offering. Mike's schooling was sketchy, to say the least, but he can figure percentages faster than a bank teller. The old lightning calculator gave a sample of his mathematical powers as he paced up and down his new offices on Broadway.

"They tell me," said Mike, "that Pastor and Louis will pull a $500,000 gate in the ball park out there Sept. 21. Not bad, not bad, a-tall. That will mean $200,000 or 40 percent for Louis and Pastor's 17 1/2 percent will bring him $87,500. And, of course, there will be quite a chunk left for Uncle Mike."

PETITIONS ASKING BALLOT ON CHARTER FORM OF GOVERNMENT TO BE FILED

COUNCIL ASKED TO GRANT VOTE ON CITY CHANGE

Chamber Of Commerce Lists 447 Names Of Persons Asking Ballot

Petitions requesting a vote on whether citizens of Circleville want a charter form of government will be filed with council Wednesday night.

This announcement was made Monday by Robert L. Brehmer, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce committee on the charter form of government.

There are 15 petitions containing 447 names ready to be submitted to council. The number required for a vote is 10 percent of the voters at the last general elections, or about 351. The votes cast at the last election totalled 3,514.

Although the petitions have been ready for submission to council for some time, the filing was delayed to prevent the necessity of a special election. The law provides that after they are filed with council the issue must be submitted in not less than 60 days nor more than 120 days. It cannot be voted at a primary.

The question and a commission of 15 which would form the charter would be voted on at the November election. The commission sets up the charter. Should the issue pass at the November election, a special election would then be called for a vote on the form of charter. The plan provides for city managership.

The candidates for the commission, Mr. Brehmer said, will be named after council decides on placing the issue before voters.

An ordinance will be up for consideration by council establishing a schedule of rates for treatment of industrial wastes in the municipal disposal plant. The rates, to be established on a four-month experimental basis, were fixed at a recent meeting of industrial plant representatives with councilmen.

An ordinance establishing regulations for the sale of milk and milk products will probably be presented for a first reading.

RURAL MAILMEN SEEKING BETTER COUNTRY ROADS

COLUMBUS, July 17—Pleading for better roads so they might offer better service, Ohio's rural mail carriers and their wives came to Columbus today for their annual three-day convention. Approximately 800 delegates were expected.

The carriers serve 1,400,000 rural patrons and to do so travel approximately 65,000 miles over 1,567 routes. About 5,200 miles are "pure dirt roads," complained Robert Baker, London, editor of the Ohio Rural Carrier, who expressed a desire for servicing of roads in bad shape.

Convention activities were scheduled to get underway at 10 a. m. with a welcoming address by Mayor Myron Gessaman. The banquet will be held tomorrow night as will election of officers.

Walter D. Gray, Wooster, president of the organization, was to preside at business sessions and he, along with other officers, was expected to join in opposing further diversion of gasoline and auto tag revenues for relief and other purposes. Diversion removes money ordinarily used for upkeep of roads.

One of the oldest delegates in point of service was E. P. Goodman, 69, Wooster, now retired, but who in his 42 years of service, carried the mail a distance equal to 14 times around the world.

Large Barn on Cromley Farm Lost in Flames

By S. D. FRIDLEY Phone Ashville 79

Sunday at about 1 a. m. the large cattle and hay barn across Walnut creek and a half mile south of Ashville, the property of Charles Cromley, was discovered to be on fire. A general alarm brought hundreds to the scene but the flames had gained such headway that saving the structure was impossible and it was entirely consumed together with about 40 tons of hay and a few hogs, the exact number not known.

By hard efforts of a bucket brigade the horse barn and corn crib nearby were saved. Whether the large silos adjacent to the destroyed building have been rendered worthless is not yet determined. The loss is in part covered by insurance. Cause of fire not known.

BLAST BLAMED FOR TRAGEDY OF RESCUE PLANE

NEW YORK, July 17—With eyewitness reports that an explosion shattered the coast guard hospital plane V-164 which plunged into the sea Saturday about 150 miles southeast of New York with a loss of three lives, an official coast guard board of inquiry was to convene here today to attempt to fix the cause for the tragedy.

Of the five survivors, two were in the hospital while the other three were cloaked in official silence pending the inquiry.

However, the crew of the ketch Atlantis, from which the coast guard plane, summoned by radio, was removing George Priest, of Falmouth, Mass., a crew member ill with pneumonia, declared on landing at Woods Hole, Mass., that a blast of some sort appeared to have rent the V-164 from stem to stern.

With Priest safely transferred, the V-164 took off but had barely soared into the air when it plunged into the sea, disappearing with Priest, Lieut. William Lee Clemmer, its commander, and John Radan, Jr., an enlisted pilot.

Russell D. Hayes, a yeoman, was in the hospital, unconscious from a spine injury. Frank L. Evers, radio man, was less critically hurt. Carl A. Simon, Charles R. Whelan and Walter B. Salter, all mechanics, escaped uninjured.

STATE HIGHWAY OFFICE PLANS ROAD PROJECTS

Seven Jobs To Be Let As Single Unit In Three Counties

MOST IS IN PICKAWAY

Route 22, 188 And 277 To Have Much Work Done Prior To Sept. 30

A road surface treatment program that includes 31.52 miles of highways in Pickaway, Madison and Fayette counties and will cost nearly $18,000 was announced Monday by the state highway department. With the exception of a small amount of work, the entire program is centered in Pickaway county.

The program, listed in seven projects, will be let as one contract with September 30 as the completion date. Bids will be opened Tuesday, August 8, at 10 a. m. in the highway department offices, Columbus. The specifications call for surface treatment with bituminous material.

Included in the project are: Route 22, Washington township, 3.5 miles of 18-foot roadway, estimated cost $1,264. Route 188, Walnut, Washington and Circleville townships, 5.87 miles of 10-foot roadway, estimated cost $3,486.50.

Route 22, Deercreek and Wayne townships, 6.75 miles of 8-foot roadway, estimated cost $1,445. Route 277, Perry and Deercreek townships, 3.95 miles of 18-foot roadway, estimated cost $2,461.25. Route 277, Perry township, 4.63 miles of 20-foot roadway, estimated cost $3,982.50.

Route 277 in Madison and Marion townships, Fayette county, 5.72 miles of 18-foot roadway, estimated cost $4,542.50. Route 277, Pleasant township, Madison county, 1.1 miles, estimated cost $750.

All interested persons are invited to attend the exercises.

WHEEL OF AUTO IS BLAMED FOR DEATHS OF TRIO

CLINTON, Ia., July 17—Three Clinton men killed when their automobile hurtled over a cliff early Sunday were the victims of an unusual but apparently unavoidable accident, authorities indicated today.

Police said they had been told by Carl Wells of Sabula, Ia., that as he was driving in the vicinity of the fatal crash his car lost a wheel. He righted his machine after desperate effort, he said, but did not notice what had become of the lost wheel.

Investigators who found the wheel near the wrecked machine said it had apparently rolled under the Clinton men's car, throwing it out of control and over the cliff. Those killed were Charles Carter, 26, and Art Fleming, 25, both railroad bridge tenders, and Floyd Fulton, 22, recently discharged from the navy. A fourth man, Seldon Orrick, 25, an auto salesman, was critically hurt.

12 EPWORTH LEAGUERS WIN CAMPGROUND HONOR

Twelve members of the Epworth League of First Methodist church received certificates Sunday at the Lancaster campground for the completion of class work and achievements in the Epworth League Institute. In addition the Circleville Epworth League received an honor award.

Those who attended the institute and were awarded certificates were David Hilyard, Glenn Barnhart, Warren Bumgarner, Patty Bennett, Dorothy Cook, Marvinne Henness, Janet Funk, Dorothy Reid, Dorothy Ann Dresbach, Eleanor Wiggins, Rose Mary Huffer and Betty Herkless.

The Rev. and Mrs. C. F. Bowman accompanied the young folk.

GIRL, 16, FACES MURDER COUNT; FATHER KILLED

DANVILLE, Ill., July 17—A murder charge was expected to be placed today against 16-year-old Alta Bernice Heath, who police said confessed she killed her father when he returned home intoxicated and abused her.

The father, Andrew Heath, 39, a brickyard worker, died Sunday from a shot wound in the left side. Police quoted the girl as saying her father had been drinking heavily for two years, during which time he had subjected her almost daily to severe whippings. Saturday night, the girl allegedly told police, she shot Heath when he came home "very drunk," beat her and tried to force his way into her room.

WHEEL OF AUTO IS BLAMED FOR DEATHS OF TRIO

CLINTON, Ia., July 17—Three Clinton men killed when their automobile hurtled over a cliff early Sunday were the victims of an unusual but apparently unavoidable accident, authorities indicated today.

Police said they had been told by Carl Wells of Sabula, Ia., that as he was driving in the vicinity of the fatal crash his car lost a wheel. He righted his machine after desperate effort, he said, but did not notice what had become of the lost wheel.

Investigators who found the wheel near the wrecked machine said it had apparently rolled under the Clinton men's car, throwing it out of control and over the cliff. Those killed were Charles Carter, 26, and Art Fleming, 25, both railroad bridge tenders, and Floyd Fulton, 22, recently discharged from the navy. A fourth man, Seldon Orrick, 25, an auto salesman, was critically hurt.

12 EPWORTH LEAGUERS WIN CAMPGROUND HONOR

GIRL, 16, FACES MURDER COUNT; FATHER KILLED

DANVILLE, Ill., July 17—A murder charge was expected to be placed today against 16-year-old Alta Bernice Heath, who police said confessed she killed her father when he returned home intoxicated and abused her.

The father, Andrew Heath, 39, a brickyard worker, died Sunday from a shotgun wound in the left side. Police quoted the girl as saying her father had been drinking heavily for two years, during which time he had subjected her almost daily to severe whippings. Saturday night, the girl allegedly told police, she shot Heath when he came home "very drunk," beat her and tried to force his way into her room.
